Formerly the home of Westmoreland Davis (governor of Virginia 1918-1922) and his wife, Morven Park is operated by a private foundation, preserving the extensive historic and natural resources left by the Davises, and advancing the couple's ideals and accomplishments.

This quiet, yet convenient escape offers settings that range from formal to rustic, from intimate to sprawling. Four indoor meeting spaces include an equestrian-themed conference room and a historic stone barn, flanking a courtyard paved with antique bricks. Inside a stately Greek revival mansion, a 19th century ballroom contains a wall of glass doors that offer an unparalleled view of the estate. The Carriage Museum offers a distinctive space for meetings or parties, surrounding attendees with an eclectic collection of horse-drawn antique vehicles.

Outside, acres of lush lawns with views of the Mansion are perfectly suited for large company picnics or employee recognition events. Or if you are looking for a venue offering team-building experiences, 20 acres of athletic fields, hiking trails, a croquet court, and wide open spaces provide flexibility to suit any need.
